This song is awesomely tight. InVH1 rated it as the 9th greatest hard rock song of all time.

Monk talked the band into designing, manufacturing, and selling their own merchandise. We first meet the band when they start a tour to support their first album in support of Journey and Montrose which is when Monk enters their lives as road manager. What Monk does provide is pages on how he used to track down merchandise counterfeiters.

But he missed and nailed Steve Perry instead. The last 30 pages would have been horns were mounted in a box and powered by two car batteries, with a foot switch to turn them on and off. Also by his own admission, he was nowhere near the studio during the entire recording of the album, during which time Monk acknowledged that the relationship between band members, and the relationship between band members and him were deteriorating.
